Inspection judgements

Overall experiences and progress of children and young people: good

Since the last inspection, two children have moved into the home. The manager, works together with the children's social worker to complete a thorough assessment of children's needs and past experiences before they move into the home. This helps staff to understand children's experiences and how best to support them. Children receive a warm welcome from staff who make efforts to get to know children's likes, including their favourite foods.

Children's care plans are very detailed and include realistic targets to meet their individual needs. The manager advocates for children to access education provision. However, children living at this home are not yet attending full-time education and interim support is not in place. This could affect children's achievement and outcomes if this is not in place soon.

The manager and staff team make sure that children's health needs are met, and support children with taking their medication and receiving courses of dental treatment. The manager and staff team encourage children to make progress with their independence skills by visiting the shops locally and having their hair cut. Staff help reassure children when they are feeling anxious at night to prevent further incidents of self-harm.

Staff have nurturing and respectful relationships with children based on an understanding of their past experiences. Staff regularly gather children's wishes and feelings and listen to them about how they feel. For example, staff talk to children about family time, identity, mental health and personal anxieties. This helps support children with their emotional and mental well-being. A child told the inspector during this inspection that they were happy living at this home.

How well children and young people are helped and protected: good

Since the monitoring visit, there have not been any allegations or complaints made against staff. There have been no incidents of missing from home or physical restraints during this period. Staff shared with the inspector that children's safety is a priority and that they were confident in safeguarding procedures.

The manager carefully evaluates the risks of children living together through comprehensive matching assessments. This helps to ensure that children's progress is not hindered and that their welfare is prioritised.

Safer recruitment processes are strong. The registered manager ensures that staff identification documents and Disclosure and Barring Service checks are available, and gaps in employment and references are verified. This helps to reduce the risk of harm to children. New staff receive more frequent supervision and manager oversight to ensure that they can provide high levels of care to children.

The effectiveness of leaders and managers: good

Since the monitoring visit, the new manager has made widespread improvements to the operation and ethos in the home. For example, the manager has ensured that there is now an effective out-of-hours system in place and spends time building relationships with staff and listening to their opinions. A staff member told the inspector that the manager is, 'Really good, she leads us and is exceptionally knowledgeable and has great experience. She is also very approachable.'

Staff receive consistent and reflective supervision that assists them in developing their skills and improving the care provided to children. Monthly psychology and weekly psychotherapy sessions enable staff to develop their practice and strategies to manage children's individual behaviours. Monthly team meetings are used as a forum to share information and ideas. The detailed records of meetings include follow-up actions to help staff in providing individualised care for children.

The manager monitors staff training and development needs effectively. All staff are up to date with the required mandatory training and receive additional training about life story work, LGBTQ+ and Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder. This training helps staff to develop their awareness and understanding to meet the needs of children in their care.

The manager works in partnership with social workers and has regular communication with them. A social worker shared during this inspection that, 'They are excellent at communicating with all professionals involved with the child, providing written and verbal reports.' Another social worker shared, 'I really do think that it is a brilliant setting and the child is flourishing in their care.'
